Walter Kilroy Harris, 23 years of age, has the distinction of having achieved the longest overland journey ever attempted in Australia with a single horse, an account of which he gives in his book Outback in Australia. The journeys include a 1,700 mile cattle droving trip in the far western parts of Queensland and New South Wales, and a 2,400 mile drive with a younger brother in a one horse sulky a two wheeled buggy, drawn through-out by "a low bodied, thick legged, ? year old bay pony mare." trip of 1,100 miles—rations cost 23 cents for the horse and absolutely nothing for the two brothers! Byron had strange habits, with regard to food. "Don Juan" was written largely upon gin and water, and on other occasions he lived for weeks on six biscuits a day, often fasting entirely for 48 hours. One slice of bread for breakfast and a vegetable dinner kept him going in 1816, though at times he had to chew tobacco to keep down his hunger. Vinegar and water and a little rice was another of his experimental diets. But he had his moments of indulgence and Moore tells of a supper at which he ate three lobsters and washed them down with half a dozen glasses of strong brandy.

Like many other great men, Pasteur was absent-minded, Eating some cherries at a dinner party to which he was invited, he was observed to dip each cherry in a glass of water and care-fully wipe it before placing it in his mouth. On his neighbor's uttering some comment on this precaution Pasteur held forth at considerable length as to the dangerous microbes with which wild cherries are invariably covered. When he had finished talking he picked up the glass he had washed the fruit in and drank the contents-microbes and all.
